

February 08, 2026: On Meeting the Stucci Brothers in Real Life

When your favorite TV (bad) actors start showing up in real life - you're not watching The Ring - you're actually playing your own part in the movie 'White Men Can't Jump.'

See, when you start 'following the stars', the 'stars' start 'following you.'

'I snuck onto Epstein island - what I saw next left me speechless'

A YouTuber who snuck onto Jeffrey Epstein's abandoned Little Saint James island claims he is now being followed.

In the days following the filming of his expedition, Nico alleged there were "suspicious vehicles" stationed near his residence. He informed his audience he had contacted law enforcement regarding the 4by4s.

He stated: "It has been five days since I posted the video of me sneaking onto Jeffrey Epstein 's island and everyday there have been blacked-out SUVs sitting outside my house. I don't know who these people are or what they want."

He proceeded to display photographs of the vehicles, describing the situation as "so weird ". Epstein Island was scheduled to welcome tourists as a destination last year.

They don't just stay in their 'vehicles' either.

They also station themselves to appear as though they are 'standing guard' over their property.

They 'shepherd you' in and out of your home when you travel.

And. . . if you start asking them questions or confronting them about their behavior . . .

They call the police on YOU! (As if YOU'RE the criminal for caring about why a bunch of people have shown up around your house making noises, and displaying 'strange' sign languages)

THIS officer got caught on a small chain that I had covering the broken stairs (for safety) as he attempted to chase me into my house (to snatch me as I walked calmly back inside) on the night shown in this surveillance clip.

And since the team of people that spies on my life day and night and night and day wants to send acoustic agitations into my home as I compile documentary evidence of their threatening ways, I will be sure to add in their calling card for everyone to see and understand how and why this happened.
